Special remarks: _____

1. Can webcasting (web radio) also be received on mobile end devices*) via streaming?

NO YES

*) If the webcasting service can also or only be used with mobile reception devices (mobile phone), the prerequisites for a mobile use are fulfilled; the tariff provisions in Annex 2 apply.

2. Is this a classic web radio via streaming, which is not started by the user but transmitted simultaneously to several users (without any interactive option of influence by the user) and is not intended for storage?

NO YES  continue to Q 2

▪ Which usage types shall be licensed?

interactive usage*) personalised usage)

*) According to the webcast operating conditions, a webcasting service shall be deemed to be interactive whenever the listener have options to directly influence the programme by means of technical features. Examples for this include the option to jump to the next title (skip function) or to interrupt the programme (pause function); the tariff provisions in Annex 2 apply.

) Whenever a listener has the option to create a listener profile (rating function, individual preferences for a specific music genre by entering a certain title/artist) or to change the programme permanently and individually ("I like it" or "Never-Play-Again" function), it is a personalised webcasting service; the tariff provisions in Annex 2 apply.

▪ Are these usage types operated according to the provisions of the operating webcasting conditions?

(You can access the operating conditions at www.gvl.de in the section rights users/web radio.)
